Jack Kent Cooke 2019 Transfer Scholarship

ALEXIS TUCKER
Managing Editor

Students planning on attending a four-year university have many things on their mind, and the largest is usually the price of getting their degree. With the Jack Kent Cooke Scholarship, students can get through their degree with one less thing to worry about—their finances.

Jack Kent Cooke was a wealthy entrepreneur from Canada who owned the Washington Redskins, Los Angeles Lakers and Los Angeles Kings. He was a devoted man to education, and after his death in 1997, the Jack Kent Cooke Foundation was founded in 2000 to help exceptionally bright students go to college and have awarded around $190 million to students.

The scholarship is up to $40,000 a year and covers tuition, room and board, and books. Students must be attending a four-year university in fall 2019 and be a sophomore by Dec. 31, 2018. Application submission opened Sept. 13 and the deadline is Nov. 27. Applying students must use the Common App, and they have to select Jack Kent Cooke as a "school" for the scholarship specific questions. If students transfer to a uni-

Extracurricular activities are invaluable to college experience

It's important to go somewhere after the class ends. At Student Activities, there are over 30 clubs operated by students focused at creating events for students. Last academic year, there were 273 events on campus, and this year's expectations are just as high. These events give great opportunity for career building, community volunteering, socializing and spiritual building.

Extracurricular activities are a great way to get active in campus life and spend your time. Even if being active at school doesn't sound very fun, it's a great way to network with people in your field and practice different skills. It also looks good on a resume to say you have some type of experience doing what you want to do and working with others. Even if someone does not have interest in existing clubs, there's always the option to create a new one that pertains to someone's interests or goals.

Resume building is important to be thinking about right now, especially when there are specific clubs on campus to do just that. The several career and class specific clubs help with building skills for that career path or help with classes, and students will be surrounding themselves with like-minded individuals. Staying on campus to meet other students helps build a support network when classes get hard, so students will have people to study with when those times come.

The Student Activities not only offers clubs and a plethora of events to explore, but also contains other amenities to enjoy.

The gaming area is filled with Xbox Ones, and a newly refreshed game catalog in which students can rent out controllers and games. A Ping Pong table and pool table is also available to challenge your friends to a quick game. Students in exchange for an ID can play anytime between, before or even after classes. There is also a movie area where students can just sit down enjoy movies and snack on some free popcorn offered Monday through Thursday. Students can request at any time movies of choice in the Student Activities Office. With the upcoming School Daze festival, we hope to see even more students come down to the Lower Waterman and enjoy what Student Activities has to offer.

Yours truly,
Schoolcraft Connection staff

OPINIONS

Sony's approach to cross-play is bad for gaming industry

CHRISTIAN HOLLIS
Editor-in-Chief

Have you ever been in a conversation with a classmate, co-worker or acquaintance and discovered that you both share a common interest in playing video games? You quickly bond by sharing memories of your gaming past, how you got that extermination in Team Slayer on Pit in "Halo 3," that game winning tactical nuke in "Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 2," or that time you got that 10-kill Victory Royale in "Fortnite."

Then the question comes up, "So, what system do you play on?"

And they respond, "PlayStation 4."

Your heart is broken.

You bought that Xbox One for your personal preferences in the controller and exclusives. A new potential member of your "Fortnite" squad is gone. If they had a Nintendo Switch, it could work just fine, if they were a PC Master Race, you could hang with the best of the best. Even if they mostly played on their phone, you could play together with no issues. But PS4? Sony won't allow it. All of those potential memories go dark because Sony feels that cross-play isn't necessary.

But why?

The ability to play with whoever, wherever despite platform of choice seems best for both developers and players. Developers and publishers benefit from a larger player base, resulting in shorter queue times between matches and longer commitments to games, while the consumer benefits by being able to play with their friends.

Don't let anyone lie to you. Enabling cross-play in your favorite games is as simple as flicking a switch, and there is no major technological hurdle. In fact, on Sept. 18, 2017, Epic Games accidentally enabled cross-platform play, but was quickly shut down.

Sony CEO Kenichiro Yoshida, commented on the cross-play controversy in an interview with the Independent. "On cross-platform, our way of thinking is always that PlayStation is the best place to play. 'Fortnite' I believe, partnered with PlayStation 4, is the best experience for users. That's our belief."

Yoshida contradicts himself because if PlayStation was the best place to play

"Fortnite," then you would be able to play with everyone despite platform. The only reason is corporate greed. Sony only cares about the sale numbers of their system. Sony wants you to pay their annual fee of $60 a year, on top of whatever you're paying on other platforms to play with your friends. In other words, Sony is making it harder for you to play with your friends.

Despite Sony's negligence, Microsoft and Nintendo have partnered together to allow players to play cross-platform on many games including "Fortnite," "Minecraft" and "Rocket League." Hopefully, Sony will turn this around, but at the moment, they are a setback to innovation in the gaming industry.

Is owning the latest trends in fashion worth the price you pay?

MARVIN POINDEXTER
Arts & Entertainment Editor

When it comes to the latest trends in fashion, specifically street wear, there are people willing to pay top dollar for sneakers and clothing lines from top name brands such as Supreme, Vans, Nike, Jordan, Adidas and many more. These items, which retail around $100 to $200, are resold for double or even triple the original value.

But is it really worth it?

What's the purpose of owning and paying an exorbitant amount, for a pair of sneakers or an item of clothing? For some consumers it's to show off and for others it's to be a part of the hype. Some collect, while others resell items for profit. There are also those that simply think that owning such high-end items will make them stylish. But does it? The answer: No.

Wanting to own or even actually owning some of the most hype or expensive items in street wear isn't a contrite thing, but it doesn't make one stylish per say. Street wear originated from skateboarding and Hip/Hop culture. What was once affordable and inspired by urban culture, is now competing high-end designer brands. Brands such as Gucci, Louis Vuitton and Saint Laurent, all have recently taken notice of the popularity of street wear and have even started to adopt some of the elements of the style into their own collections.

However, like previously noted, owning such products doesn't necessarily make one stylish. Consumers don't have to break the bank in order to be considered stylish or fashionable. It's about how the items are styled and what you like. There are also reduced-price alternatives to some of the brands that offer the same or similar aesthetic to their high-end counterparts. Stores and brands such as H&M, Pacsun, Forever 21, Asos, Grailed, Anti-Social Social Club (ASSC) sell more items that cater toward the street wear aficionado. College students especially can find these alternatives to be a goldmine and won't break the bank.

As described by Verge Campus, "Any college student will tell you that H&M can be a goldmine for clothing. Yes, the hoodie may fit like a collapsed tent and yes sometimes the quality is so bad the hoodie looks almost see-through. Point is, $20 clothing in cool colors and styles should not be overlooked."

This concept can specifically be applied to sneakers as well.

Sometimes you can't get the latest sneaker on the day it drops. The next best thing to do is to try resellers. The problem with resellers though, is that some may charge double the amount and some depending on the seller, may sell for higher price than retail. Instead of going after the latest and most exclusive pairs of sneakers, try some cheaper alternatives like a pair of Vans, or Puma Suedes.

There is nothing wrong with wanting to be stylish or wanting the most hyped or exclusive wardrobe in fashion, however that isn't what makes you stylish. It's about how those items, or pieces in general are styled. The cost of the pieces, or the name of the brand doesn't matter.

School Daze returns

CHRISTIAN HOLLIS
Editor-in-Chief

The annual School Daze fall festival returns Sept. 19 and 20 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. under the big tent between the Liberal Arts and Forum Buildings.

Students have the opportunity to meet with representatives from over 30 clubs and organizations, which will provide information on meeting times and upcoming events in which they can participate.

The clubs participating at School Daze are diverse and focus on social, academics, art and athletics.

"At School Daze we will be promoting our club and looking for officers," said Eryn Hutchins, President of the Video Production Club. "Our table will (feature) past projects and work the club has produced."

There will also be many businesses in attendance that may give out food samples, prizes to games at their table, information about their company and more. Among these include Zap Zone and Escape Room Zone, which partnered with Student Activities to provide students with free entertainment through an escape room. Throughout the two day event, there will be plenty of chances for attendees to win prizes from minute-to-win-it games such as chubby bunny on the main stage. These games will be held every 20 minutes.

Zeal Credit Union and 99.5 WYCD are collaborating for "Sing Your Way Backstage," a karaoke truck for students to sing their favorite songs. The U.S. National Guard is coordinating a volleyball tournament on Sept. 20 during the event. Students may assemble their teams and compete against each other.

Need to unwind from all that studying? Free massages will be available.

Hot dogs are available for 50 cents and bags of chips are 25 cents for those looking for a quick affordable lunch. Free soft drinks provided by Pepsi will be available while supplies last.

Hands on experience for STEM majors

ALEXIS TUCKER
Managing Editor

Despite going through rigorous and time-consuming STEM (Science Technology Engineering Mathematics) courses, many students still will not know what they would do in their field of choice. With the addition of the SCE (science, computers, engineering) Club on campus, students now have the opportunity to see what they could be doing in the future with no prior experience needed to start.

"The entire [club] is an emphasis on hands on experience...learn, build, innovate," said Chris Wood, Physics Professor and SCE Club adviser.

SCE Club is more like a co-op than a traditional club, with students working on projects they could use on a resume for university applications or job-seeking. With the guidance of Wood, students build their project or lab throughout a period of time that is chosen by the student. A list of potential projects or labs are given by Wood to get students thinking about subject matter, but are not required. The projects themselves will utilize some of the equipment already on campus that might not get as much use otherwise, so students get to take advantage all the lab equipment Schoolcraft has to offer. Once the lab is created or project is built, students will create a showcase video if they choose to be able to physically show what they worked on and created.

Students interested in the topics but not the hands-on experience still have the opportunity to participate in the meetings to observe and learn.

Prospective SCE Club members should think about the time they are willing to allot for each session, which can be even a Saturday or Sunday, how deep into the subject matter they would like, and the sort of experience they would like to have whether it be observing or creating.

Interested students should contact Wood at cwood@schoolcraft.edu.

Learning Center services gives students resources to succeed

JOSIAH THOMAS
Staff Writer

Remember a time when you felt like quitting and dropping a class because it felt impossible to get through? Let's face it. We've all been there. Schoolcraft has just the solution to assist students who may need that extra assistance to get through that challenging chapter or course. The Learning Center offers tutoring at the main campus in Livonia, the Radcliff Center in Garden City, and online. The resources are free of charge to all registered students.

There is nothing to be embarrassed or intimidated about when asking for a tutor because students will find that the Learning Center follows a simple process. All students need to do is walk-in and let the staff assign them a tutor. Share any questions and concerns with the tutor, and the staff will point students in the correct direction. Students can find small groups working together on a select subject, and other times they can be found working together on a problem posted on the white board.

The Peer Assisted Learning Strategies (PALS) tutors are peers with a passion for a subject and are chosen to help in specific classes. PALS have completed these classes before, and they can anticipate the problems students may have. There will be a specific time set by the class or PALS every week to meet with them for a study session.

The Writing Support Studio is a peer-review staff of tutors who specialize in writing across all disciplines. They help students break their writer's block by offering help with writing, organization, structure and style. Outlines and narrowing down topics, citations and formatting such as MLA and APA formats are a few of the ways that tutors can help get reports done with high marks and that leg up on a speech. In addition, the peer-review staff helps students with grammar and mechanics, so that students will have more options to revise and refine the structure and content of their work, whether the assignment is in an English composition class or a lab report that requires technical language to complete. Work can be submitted online as well as in person to have a member of the studio check it over and proofread it.

The Tutoring Lab can help you get access to models and anatomy programs for lab classes, complete with digital programs, model skeletons and models of human anatomy. Also available are programs such as Statdisk, Adobe Photoshop and Illustrator for those CGT courses.

As for mathematics, students who need help in conquering those algebra problems and practicing their graphing calculator in time for exams can simply drop in and expect to see one ready to help with the most common problems. Others will have the opportunity to work with fellow students in small groups, often with students from the same class, receiving instruction either on an individual basis or from a tutor who takes the initiative to write a math problem for all of them to work together toward solving.

"It's great," said Elissa Mughannem, math tutor at Radcliff Center. "It's nice to be able to help people understand problems from their classes."

With 40 student employees on staff ready to assist during regular hours and special tutoring requests available in subjects outside of the STEM field, Schoolcraft delivers a pleasant, inviting and engaging learning environment where students collaborate and succeed.

For those students who may find it easier to get assistance at Schoolcraft's satellite campus in Garden City, the Radcliff Center offers many of these same programs, offering assistance in specialized fields not offered on the Livonia campus.

"We are able to assist students with almost any class they are taking and tutor a lot of math and English," said Sherrye Bailey, the Faculty Facilitator and Coordinator of the Radcliff Learning Center. "Radcliff is also home to all Allied Health programs such as Health Information Technology, Medical Assisting and EMT. We do a lot of tutoring in these specialized areas."

If in need of an accommodation for an upcoming exam, students need to sign up one week in advance to arrange for a reader or a writer to help out. Schedules are posted online at schoolcraft.edu/lac/tutoring for both campuses.

Before you give up and drop that class, consider stopping by the Learning Center for assistance and get you back on that path to success.

LEARNING SUPPORT SERVICES Success Starts Here

Dear Peer Consultants,

I have been having trouble with understanding the importance of writing as it relates to my career path. I am struggling to find the motivation for written assignments in my English courses because I do not see how this is preparing me for my future career.

Seeking Clarity,
A Hopeful Student

Dear Hopeful Student,

Even someone whose passion resides in ink and paper can share the thoughts you are having. It is okay to question the professional relevance of any type of coursework, but what matters is the change in action that those questions can lead to.

Simply put, writing is essential to all else. Whether it be a research paper in Composition to a lab report in Microbiology, what is central to all writing is the communication of ideas. Developing the student's capacity according to academic conventions is something that educational institutions view as part of a complete education. Employers in any field also view the ability to communicate ideas clearly and effectively as a vital asset. Nearly any occupation requires writing in some form. Employers will likely not ask you to compose an argumentative essay, but you will be expected to communicate your opinions on various situations and evaluate the viewpoints of clashing parties or interests. For example, medical professionals have to write reports on the status of their patients or clear directions in a treatment plan. While this is no collegiate essay, the importance of clearly communicating remains.

Writing as we refer to it in the academic arena often possesses rigid connotation, yet when writing is defined across several fields of life it begins to carry different identities that we may not typically recognize. It may not seem so now, but developing writing skills can be translated across virtually every aspect of life, from communicating with friends and family to constructing a thank you letter for a scholarship.

As aforementioned, appraising coursework is valid for any student at some point or another. As Peer Consultants, we are more than happy to support students in their desire to develop their skills as writers. We recognize that every student is unique and are therefore ready to offer our guidance along any step of the journey that is the writing process. Your willingness to better understand writing's importance and expressing your concerns to us are first steps in the right direction.

Thank you for consulting the Writing Support Studio. As always, feel free to visit us in the Learning Center of Bradner Library with any of your writing concerns.

Best Wishes,
The Writing Support Studio

Last Manga Standing and Anime Nights comes to Bradner Library

JOSHUA WALKER
Staff Writer

The Bradner Library is hosting Last Manga Standing a tournament-style event to rank the top graphic novels and manga. Manga is a Japanese form of comics and graphic novels. The top 16 novels with the most points will have an extra volume added and a trip to the second round taking place in October, for which students can vote on the winner. Ninety graphic novels and manga are available to review and vote, with the top 16 given an extra volume, while the five highest pieces of literature will be crowned as champions.

"We wanted to give a chance for students here at Schoolcraft to have a say in the literature at the library," said Joseph Miller, Reference Librarian and lead organizer of Last Manga Standing.

From the supervision of Miller and sponsor Kodansha Comics, over hundreds of graphic novels and manga have been added to Schoolcraft from their original 60.

Voting will take place in the Bradner Library. There will be three tables with various types of manga and novels on display for students to see and read at their leisure from there they vote on their favorite manga. All of the votes will be tallied where the most popular novels will move on.

SCHOLARSHIP

versity in the following spring and winter semesters, they will not be considered for the scholarship.

The foundation gives up 55 scholarships per year, but the actual number varies year-to-year as the scholarship is highly competitive with over 3,500 applicants yearly. Students must show eligibility with essay questions, academic excellence, leadership skills, service to others, and college plans in their application. With the rigorous and at times invasive process, students will have to put everything into the application, including the complexity of their life story.

To be eligible, students must not have previously attended a university and must be in need of financial aid.

To show financial need, students will need to provide tax information from the previous three years as well as from their parent(s) or guardian(s) if they are under the age of 25.

After receiving a scholarship from the Jack Kent Cooke Foundation, recipients will be required to attend a scholar's weekend in Washington D.C., sponsored by the foundation. Recipients will also have to maintain a 3.0 GPA, work in the community, demonstrate leadership, and sign an agreement called the Scholars agreement, but it is more than a scholarship. Even after winning the scholarship, students will keep in contact with the foundation and have access to a great support network.

"A student was struggling with a chemistry class," said Laurie Kattuah-Snyder, Associate Dean of Advising and Partnership and Faculty Facilitator. "They sent her text messages and emails to help...It was this community surrounding her to keep her succeeding."

At the end of each year, the student's progress will be reviewed to decide whether the student will continue to get funding. Students may be limited in receiving other scholarships with some exceptions, but the scholarship is secondary, meaning if students also receive financial aid and other scholarships, the Jack Kent Cooke Scholarship will cover the rest of the expenses.

For more information, contact the Jack Kent Cooke Foundation directly at scholarships@jkcf.org or at 800-941-3300. If in need of Common App help, go to commonapp.org/help-center.

Turning pages this fall

FALKIEWICZ
Staff Writer

The Pageturners was founded in 1993 by English Professor Dr. Faye Schuett to unite the book lovers of Schoolcraft and its community. Those who have a passion and the drive to read some amazing books can find themselves interested in the Pageturners Book Club.

"It reaches an audience through the shared experience of reading the same book and shows that reading can be a source of pleasure, a tool for self-exploration, and a meaningful way to connect to the wider world," said Professor Ela T. Rybicka the Coordinator of the Pageturners.

This fall, Pageturners are reading and discussing three books with the first being "A Doll's House" by Henrik Ibsen. "A Doll's House" is the story of an unravelling of a family between Nora and Torvald Helmer where the pair have imagined that they are happily married. However, as Torvald has just been promoted to the position of bank manager, they believe that all of their money worries are over.

The second book featured is "On Photography" by Susan Sontag, a collection of essays about the role photography plays in capitalism. "On Photography" will be read throughout October.

"Photography is the only 'language' understood in all parts of the world, and bridging all nations and cultures, it links the family of man," said Professor Rybicka. "Independent of political influence—where people are free—it reflects truthul-

More than 80 colleges, universities slated for College Night 2018

ALEXIS TUCKER
Managing Editor

Many students at Schoolcraft College transfer out to universities and knowing where to transfer takes a lot of planning. Thankfully, students and community members have the opportunity to meet with representatives of over 80 colleges at College Night Oct. 2 from 6 to 8 p.m. in the VisTaTech Center. Representatives from universities—large/small, urban/suburban, public/private, in-state/out-of-state, etc.—will be on hand. The event features an open house format to allow for the varying schedules of students and their families.

With over 80 colleges to meet with, the Michigan Association of College Registrars and Admissions Officers are making it easier to organize and maintain all of the information given out at College Night by using a barcode and scanner program. This tool is optional, but for those who would like to use it, visit gotocollegefairs.com. Once printed, students can scan their barcode to easily give information digitally.

"Keep an open mind, and take time to explore options," said Julie Button, admissions representative. "By asking questions, researching options and applying early, a student can maximize choices to further educational opportunities."

Students should keep in mind the questions they would like to ask college representatives and compare the answers from multiple colleges to pick the school best suited for the student. Each college has strengths and weaknesses, and not every school has the same programs available. A few question topics to keep in mind include admission requirements, clubs/student activities, academic resources/scholarships available, and tuition costs.

"It's a good opportunity for both high school students and college students," said Gillian Drake, Student Ambassador. "The best college [for the student] could be the unexpected one. Keep a list of schools to see before going."

Call the Answer Center at 734-462-4426 for more information.

ly life and events, allows us to share in the hopes and despair of others, and illuminates political and social conditions.”

The final book The Pageturners will read is “Eat Drink Vote: An Illustrated Guide to Food Politics”. It is a graphic novel by Marion Nestle, which illustrates 250 cartoons on issues ranging from the dietary advice to genetic engineering to childhood obesity. The novel gives insight on the basic questions of the US food system. This can give insight in what a healthy diet entails and encourages readers to vote with their forks for healthier diets.

In addition to the featured books, there will be competitions anyone can take part in such as Writing and Art Awards, created to motivate students to read, be inspired, and create back.

The applicant will have to select one of the three books and respond to it creatively in writing or in artwork. The deadline for all submissions is March 25, 2019. There will be a prize of $250 on both the Writing and the Art Contests.

ASA hosting two events during October to promote food pantry

CHRISTIAN HOLLIS
Editor-in-Chief

The Asian Student Association (ASA) is hosting two major events during October to celebrate Indian culture and diversity at Schoolcraft College. Both events serve as a fundraiser for the Schoolcraft Food Pantry, which gives the opportunity for students in need to fill out an in-take form. Once filled out, students are able to utilize the food pantry twice a month and fill two bags of non-perishable food items. Generous students, faculty and community members may donate canned foods directly to the pantry by coming to the Student Activities Office or stations spread around campus.

“I hope people will come forward themselves to help (Schoolcraft) for the good job you are doing,” said V.B. Bajaj, father of ASA adviser Anna

Maheshwari in a handwritten letter to the college. “I hope other colleges will follow.”

NAVARATRI GARBA

Navaratri Garba returns on Oct. 12 from 7 p.m. to midnight in the Diponio room of the VisTaTech Center. Tickets can be purchased in advance from the Student Activities Office for $15 or $20 at the door with children five years and under welcome for free. Advanced tickets will be waiting for attendants at the event in an envelope.

Navaratri is the nine nights of celebration of the Harvest season and Hindu goddess Durga. Durga is the destroyer of all evil and has eight hands holding different weapons. Garba is a form of dance in the Indian culture. The combining of Navaratri Garba translates to nine-night festival.

Attendants will be provided entertainment from a live band and a fully catered dinner by Suvai. Samosas, deep fried flatbread stuffed with potatoes, peas and Indian spices, will be served as appetizers with chickpea curry on rice.

LET'S NAACHO

The Bollywood dance competition Let's Naacho has come again. The competition will be held at Northville High School on Oct. 20 from 4 to 9 p.m., and it is divided into four sections for middle school, high school, college, and community members. Advanced tickets can be purchased from the Student Activities office for $10, or $12 at the door.

“One of our many goals is to showcase the Indian traditions and culture to our American friends,” said Anna Maheshwari, adviser to Asian Student Association.

For more information on Navaratri Garba or Let's Naacho, email amahesw@schoolcraft.edu or call 734-462-7188.

Dean's List

2018

During the fall and winter semesters, the college recognizes students for high academic achievement by naming them to the Dean's list. The college sends a letter of recognition to the students' home, publishes on the Schoolcraft website and publishes in the Schoolcraft Connection. The minimum requirements are that full-time students have a semester grade-point average of 3.5, or higher and that part-time students who, after completing a total of 12, 24, 36, 48, in increments of 12 credit hours, have earned a cumulative grade-point average of 3.5 or higher. # THE PLATINUM SPIDER-MAN

PlayStation, Marvel Games entraps players in their web

CHRISTIAN HOLLIS
Editor-in-Chief

Developer Insomniac, with the help of Marvel Games and PlayStation, have crafted one of the best Spider-Man stories of all time with extremely fluid gameplay but falls short when it pulls the player out of combat.

"Marvel's Spider-Man" puts the gamer in the place of a newly college graduate Peter Parker. At this point, Peter has been fighting crime under the iconic mask for eight years. He has recently found a passion in his career as a scientist and looks for mentorship under his boss. The background is given through a camera span, showing photos of Peter's parents, the late Uncle Ben and selfies from high school of Peter with love interest Mary Jane and best friend Harry Osborn.

Insomniac was able to tell a story with characters fans already love, so they placed them in different roles. Instead of MJ being a damsel-in-distress, she's a playable investigative journalist for the Daily Bugle, and sneaks into areas protected by armed guards to get information on bringing the antagonist down. Unlike the live-action movie directed by Sam Raimi, Norman Osborn isn't the main villain, he is the Mayor of New York, and Peter Parker looks up to him not as a menace, but instead his best friend's father. The characters are thrown to life by gorgeous cinematics from motion capture and carefully animated facial expressions. Voice actors Yuri Luthenwal (Peter Parker), Laura Bailey (Mary Jane) and Nancy Linari (May Parker) hit a home-run in capturing their roles.

It is truly unprecedented. Some things are a little predictable, but the fact that these characters are in a different role entirely out front flips the Marvel Universe gamers know on its head.

And yes, it is a new Marvel Gaming Universe. Easter eggs such as Avengers tower, the Sanctum Sanctorum, Matt Murdock's business card, and many more that will not be spoiled, show that Marvel Games has something magical up its sleeve that they haven't announced yet. That universe could not have a better foundation to build off than "Marvel's Spider-Man."

Every collectible, side-mission and bit of dialogue relates to the story. Backpacks scattered around Manhattan tell Peter Parker's past, landmarks begging to be photographed in each district show life in Marvel's New York City.

The gameplay shows off the most polished mechanics seen in the Open World genre. Traversal around Manhattan through web-swinging has never felt better. Combat feels really intuitive. Critics may claim it's a knock-off of Rocksteady's Arkham trilogy, but Spider-Man is much more fleshed out than those games.

Average enemies, even thugs with hand guns, are powerful. Spider-Man can go from one health to the brink of death fairly quickly against base enemies, but thanks to the Spidey-Sense, the player can swiftly dodge by bullets, and counter with a quick web.

shooters, spider drone and the electric web. Each gadget works better with situations. During a stealth mission, Spidey may need to use the tripwire to web enemies to the wall without calling for reinforcements. Gadgets are easily accessible through a gadget wheel opened by pressing L1.

After mastering combat, it feels like a ballet, going from enemy to enemy while dodging bullets, switching gadgets, dropping the big guy's guard by throwing a mailbox at him, using actual button combos, signature moves, activating a suit power during dire situations and webbing bad-guys to walls. It feels so smooth, and unlike Arkham, it's more than just pressing square and triangle over and over.

Contrasting combat, the puzzles to solve while playing as Peter Parker when he takes off the mask can get repetitive and overstay their welcome. It's made to have the player feel like a genius after solving the puzzle. The puzzles would have been much better if creators didn't pull Spidey out of gameplay for so long, and it feels Insomniac realizes that too. After taking longer than a minute to complete the puzzle, the game gives players the option to completely skip without penalty, making the puzzles seem completely pointless. It feels as though Insomniac could have gone a better way of playing as Peter Parker if given more time.

Despite issues with minor puzzles, Marvel has struck gold and have the opportunity to build an empire in the gaming industry as they did in 2008 with the film industry. "Marvel's Spider-Man" takes 25 hours to complete the main story, and 30 hours to collect all trophies for a shiny Platinum. Every minute of it will give Marvel die-hards a smile from ear to ear and have them craving for more.

"Marvel's Spider-Man" is available now exclusively on PlayStation 4.

The photo mode in "Marvel's Spider-Man" inspires fans to capture sightings around the open-world. This has created a social media phenomenon, showcasing areas that would be simple easter eggs into much more. Players are taking selfies in areas such as the Pride wall, the statue of the famous Lockjaw and Avengers tower. Spider selfies like these have spread across the web as fast as a webshooter.

Cactus Jack's true sophomore album

MARVIN POINDEXTER
Arts & Entertainment Editor

Good things come to those who wait, and after two years, the wait was well worth it.

A project that essentially was announced back in 2016 alongside the announcement and release of Travis Scott's sophomore album "Birds In The Trap Sing McKnight," at long last "Astroworld" has been delivered.

In 2017 Scott gave the fans something to hold them over until the release of his third studio project, in the form of a collaboration album with Migos member Quavo, titled "Huncho Jack Huncho." Even with the release of "Huncho Jack," some still weren't satisfied with the collaborative effort, and were left hungry for what was to come.

"Astroworld" a project essentially two years in the making, is a project worth the wait. This album demonstrates what Scott intended to do. It feels like an amusement park, with each song being interpreted as a different section of the park.

The inspiration behind Scott's third studio project comes from his hometown of Houston, Texas. The main source of inspiration being from the old Six Flags Amusement Park that was called "Astroworld." According to Scott in a 2017 interview with GQ, he capitalized on "Astroworld" and how the park impacted the creation of his album. He stated that he wanted it to sound like something was being taken away from the children.

"That's what it's going to sound like, like taking an amusement park away from children. We want it back. We want the building back. That's why I'm doing it. It took the fun out of the city." Astroworld as an amusement park was open from June 1, 1968, until it closed Oct. 30, 2005.

The album starts off with the bass heavy assisted song titled Stargazing. In the song Scott describes what seems to be a psychedelic trip of sorts, while also containing his signature use of switch up delivery. Before its appearance on "Astroworld," Stargazing has been performed multiple times in live concert, as well as being used in an album trailer four days before the release of the album. Stargazing is only the beginning of what can be called a psychedelic twisted roller-coaster ride. A ride filled with distorted vocals, heavy bass, unique melodies, constant beat switches, plus more.

The next track "Carousel" featuring Frank Ocean, according to Genius is a song about spending the day under the influence of drugs. This track also demonstrates or even reminds listeners of Ocean's graceful voice with and without the use of auto tune. One of the biggest tracks off the album, "Sicko Mode," boast features from Big Hawk, Rae Srem-murd's Swae Lee, and 6ix god himself, Drake. Aside from the song boasting big features, is also the production of the track. The track hosts a total of five features including up and coming producer Tay Keith is most notable for his work "Look Alive ft Bloc Boy Jb and Drake," and his placement on "Scorpion" with "Nonstop." "Sicko Mode" also features what Scott is known for in his music, being the switch ups. The track also showcases the work ethic that both La Flame and 6ix god stand for, especially on the third part of the song.

"Astroworld" boasts a total of 18 features, which all fit cohesively on the project. Some appearing twice, such as The Weekend being on "Skeletons" featuring Pharrell Williams, Phillip Bailey and the legendary Stevie Wonder, as well as "Wake Up." Swae Lee on "Sicko Mode" and "R.I.P. Screw no Bystanders" featuring Juice WRLD and Sheck Wes, (which can be considered the ragers anthem, for concert goers), and more.

Certain songs feel like rides with twist and turns in the form of distorted vocals, quality auto tune, hard hitting bass, and unique and at times creepy like sounds. This project also shows the influence of not only the Astroworld amusement park, but also the influence Texas has on Scott. Leading up to the release of this album, some fans were afraid Scott being with now girlfriend and mother Kylie Jenner that the Kardashian curse would affect the creation and process of "Astroworld". It is safe to say that wasn't the case whatsoever. It could even be said that now since Scott is a father that it only inspires and makes him want to achieve even more throughout his career.

Even though fans have been rewarded for their patience, it only creates more curiosity to see what the Houston rapper will do next. Compared to previous projects such as "Rodeo" and "Birds," "Astroworld" feels what can be called an equivalent to Kanye West's "Graduation" and can be literally called LaFlame's "Graduation" album. An album that shows overall growth from Scott most earlier and notable project such as "Owl Pharaoh," and "Days Before the Rodeo."

IF YOU NOTICE ANY
SUSPICIOUS ACTIVITY
ON CAMPUS, CONTACT
CAMPUS POLICE AT

On Aug. 16 at 1:15 p.m., an officer was dispatched to the College Bookstore for possible retail fraud in progress. The suspects reportedly matched the description of suspects from a previous larceny committed at the Bookstore Jan. 22.

A video plus a report filed around the same time confirmed that the August report and the January report are both connected. A campus officer arrived at the scene when two suspects, identified by a bookstore employee as one African-American female and one African-American male, walked through the Bookstore and into the store's parking lot, entering a parked silver Ford Fusion. This vehicle was followed by the officer on the scene out of the bookstore lot and through the North Lot, conducting a traffic stop on the vehicle at Saulk Drive just before the traffic light at the Seven Mile exit.

Two additional officers arrived on the scene for backup. The officer conducting the traffic stop approached suspects A and B, obtaining identification from both of them. The officer informed suspect A that she had been stopped as a part of Campus Police's investigation for a retail fraud that occurred at the Bookstore. Suspect A replied that neither she nor suspect B had stolen anything and said that the officer could search the bags before the officer even asked about the two bags in the back seat of the vehicle. After the voluntary search was conducted, both bags were empty and bookstore merchandise was not found in the back seat nor the trunk of the vehicle. The officer identified one of the bags in the back seat, a black backpack, as a match for the backpack seen on camera in the connected larceny from January.

During the same stop, it was discovered that suspect A had a valid warrant out of the Westland Police Department, a criminal bench warrant for probation violation. Suspect A was then taken into custody both for this warrant and for the Bookstore larceny from January. The first backup officer made contact with the Livonia PD concerning the lodging of the prisoners.
